

2017 MAJOR – Ancient History - Egypt and Near East

(Qualifying Major for Bachelor of Arts)

This major offers the comprehensive study of the history, society, religions and material culture of ancient Egypt, ancient Israel and the Near East. A critical interdisciplinary approach integrates ancient history subjects with the disciplines of archaeology and art history to provide the knowledge and skills required for subsequent learning and research at postgraduate level. The structure of the major is flexible to allow students to shape the major and tailor their studies to suit their personal interests. Students may enrol in internal or external mode. The major reflects the diversity of subject areas represented in the Department of Ancient History.

The table below is a suggested first session for students beginning in Session 2, 2017. Please make your selection of units after reviewing the requirements of your award in the 2017 Handbook:
