

2019 MAJOR – Radio, Digital Audio and Broadcast Production

(Qualifying Major for Bachelor of Media with the degree of Bachelor of Laws)

The major in Radio, Digital Audio and Broadcast Production introduces students to the radio broadcasting industry, practice and ethics. The major is built around a substantial practical component in radio broadcast and production that embraces the contemporary position of radio and its relationships with other media, especially online platforms. The radio broadcast and production units are complemented by offerings that allow students to explore synergies with web design, music production or vocal studies. Students are able to complete an internship as part of the major, which gives them the opportunity to situate their studies within an industry placement.

The table below is a suggested first session for students beginning in Session 2, 2019. Please make your selection of units after reviewing the requirements of your award in the 2019 Handbook:
