

2019 MAJOR – Development Studies and Culture Change

(Qualifying Major for Bachelor of Social Science)

A major in Development Studies and Culture Change gives students an understanding of theoretical and practical problems involved in how diverse peoples can find sustainable ways of development. The Program integrates studies in anthropology and human geography, and offers options in these and other fields of interest. The unique focus on culture change is a response to real demand for an understanding of development and the subjective experiences of social, cultural and environmental change at different scales. The program provides opportunities for global education including study abroad, internship and volunteer positions through Macquarie International, PACE, and the Global Futures Program. Development Studies and Culture Change offers a stimulating education based on a critical engagement with questions of development, culture, ecology, geography, politics, scale, globalisation, and social transformation, as experienced in a variety of places around the globe. This program includes critical reflections on 'development' during colonial and postcolonial periods as well as in contemporary contexts.

The table below is a suggested first session for students beginning in Session 2, 2019. Please make your selection of units after reviewing the requirements of your award in the 2019 Handbook:
